

WHO WE ARE

AWC Lubbock began in 1955 as Theta Sigma Phi, led by the late Louise Allen, a journalism instructor at Texas Tech University. The chapter meets twice a month. The first meeting is to discuss business and hear officer reports from the board of directors. The second meeting features a renowned speaker who contributes to the personal and professional development of members. Other chapter events include membership mixers, an annual planning retreat, the annual Celebrity Luncheon, and a biennial national conference. A portion of all funds raised from our events supports a scholarship fund for local communications students and support professional development opportunities for AWC Lubbock members.

HOW TO JOIN

Membership is open to many different career paths, from marketing to journalism, design to writing, and photography to public relations. AWC Lubbock does not charge local dues. Members pay only the cost of meals for monthly business and program meetings and annual national membership dues.

Visit <http://www.awclubbock.org/> for more information about joining AWC.